

I read with interest the comment about the proposed changes to fax rules. I have two issues:

- * we currently use fax reminders to our existing customers, mainly restaurants and use only our data base for sending of information. The rule changes will make it more difficult to complete business as often people forget to respond.

- * it is further disappointing when we know our competitors already "break" the rules and frequently send unsolicited faxes to our existing customers will probably just ignore this situation. In regard to this are we allowed to report such incidents or does it need to be the recipient?